TeYosh is a multidisciplinary art directors duo making cutting-edge contemporary digital art. It is a collaboration between Sofija Stanković and Teodora Stojković, both graduates of Design master program of Sandberg Institute. Originally from Serbia, currently they live and work in Amsterdam.

TeYosh is interested in defining and analyzing modern day social phenomena. Their artistic practice is devoted to exploring the relationship between human and technology. They explore how everyday use of digital technology has "rewired" our brains; it influenced our habits, thoughts and perception of the world. They comment on time we spend surrounded by digital technology and how our brain's problem-solving mechanisms rely on it. We are living in symbioses with our gadgets, on the verge of singularity.

TeYosh works on commissioned design projects as well as on self-initiated research projects. The studio specialises in art direction and animation. TeYosh is available for working on art direction, video & animation, concept development, web design and giving lectures/workshops. Selected past clients include MTV, Nike, Cinekid festival, Playgrounds festival, MOTI museum and Barcelona Mobile Week.
